

Everything educators need to build strong writing skills, all in one convenient online location.

As educators ourselves, we understand how busy a teacher's day can be, and we know that the best teaching tools are easy to use. That's why we created the Hub: a centralized, convenient platform that provides instant access to digital teaching guides, lesson plans, scope and sequence documents, rubrics, and instructional tools—all in one place. Instruction is vertically aligned, ensuring that teaching is scaffolded year after year.

The image shows a computer monitor displaying the Empowering Writers Hub interface. The screen shows a navigation menu for 'Grade 2 All In One Writing Guide' and a detailed lesson plan for 'Lesson 2: Recognizing Genre & Introducing Opinion Writing'. The lesson plan includes an 'Objective' section, a 'Procedure' section with a video thumbnail, and a 'Teacher Background - Recognizing Genre' section. To the right, a teacher with curly hair, wearing a purple shirt, is standing in front of a whiteboard. She is pointing to a large graphic organizer titled 'Informational Pillar'. The organizer is divided into sections: 'INTRODUCTION Lead/Topic Sentence', 'Main Idea #1' (with two detail boxes), 'Main Idea #2' (with two detail boxes), 'Main Idea #3' (with two detail boxes), and 'Conclusion'. The whiteboard also has the text 'PPTC: How to Write an Opinion' and 'Main idea #1' written on it. The background features stylized yellow and blue curved lines.

Lesson 6: Writing Response to Paragraphs

Objective

Students become familiar with several techniques for crafting Response to Text introduction paragraphs and, in directed fashion, compose one.

Procedure

1. Explain to students that when writing in response to text their introduction should be straight-forward, addressing each given and variable in the assignment. Photocopy and distribute copies of Strategies for Crafting a Response to Text Introduction, pp. 404-405.
2. Walk students through Strategies for Crafting a Response to Text Introduction, discussing each step, reading the examples, and pointing out how each technique is applied in the sample response.

THE UNIQUE AND BEAUTIFUL SIAMESE

1. There is no doubt that dogs, big or small, make wonderful pets. However, an equally good choice is my absolute favorite: the regal Siamese cat. A love a pet with an elegant beauty, a melodic voice and a loving nature?

2. Once you see the gorgeous blue-eyes of a Siamese, you will surely agree that it is a majestically beautiful animal. Its short, silky fur is cream-colored with rich, dark points on the face, toes and ears. I love the proud way they walk with their tails held high and their heads held high. Shedding is never a problem with this breed.

On Givens and Variables

Teacher: As you continue through school, into college or work, you'll be required to not only write reports or essays, but to use books and online articles as sources of information to include in your paper. In class we're going to begin to look at the best way to approach the kinds of assignments you'll be facing, and to analyze these assignments in order for you to respond appropriately. Let's look at some typical assignments and figure out how to do the kind of detective work that makes for effective written responses. Take a look at this assignment...

(Projects or displays the following assignment/prompt and reads it aloud.)

You've read two texts about migration in nature. Write an essay describing two different kinds of creatures that migrate. Be sure to include examples from both texts.

Student: But we didn't read anything about migration!

Teacher: You're right. If I expected you to write a response to this assignment you would have had to read both texts. But I'm not asking you to actually write an essay about this. Instead we're just going to analyze the assignment.

Student: Phew!

Teacher: Before we get any further, would you say you're being asked to write a narrative or an expository response? Are you being asked to write a story or provide information?
